About

GeekHub is a project that enables talented young people to get hands-on knowledge of software and IT development in general. The Geekhub team is a group of information technology professionals who prepare students for a successful career in the industry. All GeekHub team members work at leading software companies, acquiring new knowledge and skills every day. It is this that makes it possible to teach only the actual material that will be required when working in real production conditions. We call GeekHub "Open Source" because it is this ideology that drives the whole program. Everything we do revolves around relationships between people. GeekHub courses are not worth the money. All that is required is intrinsic motivation and a lot of independent work. If you are interested in partnering with GeekHub, or have ideas on how to make GeekHub better - please contact us any way you like.
